The petitioner is denied permission to write the examination for the B.Ed. course on the ground that she is short of required attendance. The fact that there is shortage of attendance is not disputed. Petitioner's contention is that petitioner could not attend classes due to illness. Whatever be the reason, for shortage of attendance the remedy of the petitioner lies in filing an application for condonation of shortage of attendance before the University. The same has not so far been done. As such, the petitioner is not entitled to write the examination until the shortage of attendance is duly condoned. If the petitioner makes an application in the prescribed form through the principal of the petitioner's college, the University shall consider the same and pass orders thereon expeditiously.

The writ petition is disposed of as above.
